UH Hilo

Degree:	Minor
Division:	Sociology
Title:	Minor in Gender and Women
Description:	The Gender and Women's Studies Department at UH-Hilo promotes an interdisciplinary understanding of how race, class, sexuality, nation and other elements of diversity intersect with the study of women and categories of gender. Our mission is to cultivate active leadership skills and a sense of responsibility grounded in a critical social justice approach to individual and collective transformation in Hawaii and beyond. In the UH Hilo Gender and Women's Studies program, empowerment of students has both inward and outward goals. Inwardly, Gender and Women's Studies enables students to extricate themselves in a constructive and intelligent manner from reductive structures or conflicts. This empowerment enhances self-esteem creating a strong and positive attitude that encourages further education. Outwardly, the student of Gender and Women's Studies learns to challenge institutional barriers, demonstrates leadership in the workplace, and acquires an increased awareness of working with others of different cultures and genders. Our curriculum advances both of these goals to inspire students as agents of change.

[CRC NOTE: THIS TEXT APPLIES TO THE MINOR AND TO SOME EXTENT THE MAJOR.]

The UH Hilo Gender and Women's Studies degree program has evolved from the Women's Studies certificate program. The name change recognizes that gender is a social and cultural category in a wide spectrum of masculinities and femininities. Gender and Women's Studies addresses heterosexual as well as gay, lesbian, bisexual, transgender, intersex (GLBTI) issues and is concerned with understanding the role of human sexuality and gender in diverse contexts. Gender and Women's Studies will be an interdisciplinary degree program in the College of Arts and Sciences and will focus on the significance of gender in all aspects of human lived experience, especially in the formation of human identities, cultural practices, economic relations, and social institutions.

Gender and Women's Studies provides an interdisciplinary liberal arts degree that is academically rigorous and structured around specific learning outcomes. Due to the fact that the curriculum offers substantial numbers of courses from English, Political Science, Sociology, Anthropology, History, and Geography, students will frequently select GWS as a minor along with these majors as they have with the certificate. Its interdisciplinary nature also facilitates completing UH Hilo's general education requirements.

The B.A. in GWS and, to some extent, the minor provide a strong theoretical and methods core. Additionally, these courses constitute an integrated foundation based on the Program's learning outcomes. In addition to the requirements of WS 151 (Introduction) and WS 495 (Capstone), students are offered a selection of several dozen electives across some of the College's strongest majors. No more than six credits one discipline can be counted, facilitating an interdisciplinary education.

The Women's Studies Certificate at UH Hilo was instituted in 1993 with over 90 certificates being issued since. Between AY 2001-02 and AY 2012-13 alone, 70 WS certificates have been issued to students with majors in Communications, English, History, Anthropology, Sociology, Marine Sciences, Philosophy, and Political Science, and Administration of Justice.

In the most recent five years for which data were available (AY 2006-07 to AY 2010-2011), the Instructor and affiliated faculty from other Departments have delivered an average of 1,112.4 SSH per academic year. With the exception of the four WS alpha courses (delivered by the WS Instructor), all courses originate in other academic departments as routinely offered courses. The interest by both students and faculty has been increasing, particularly since 2007-2008 with more courses being cross-listed each semester and the development of new courses in critical areas such as feminist and gender theory.

As a result, the Gender and Women's Studies Program, including the minor, will make an important contribution to a now small, but growing, number of interdisciplinary programs at UH Hilo. Interdisciplinary programs are increasingly recognized in undergraduate and graduate education as critical in teaching students how various disciplines confront important intellectual questions or problems (Association of American Universities 2005). Interdisciplinary studies promote collaborative work across disciplines among both faculty and students. These programs have even been cited as improving the retention of returning adult students, in part, because of their flexibility (Kelly 2006).

The outcomes of the Gender and Women's Studies Program, including the minor, support the strategic goals of the UH Hilo campus in key areas, particularly Goals 1, 2, 4, and 5 as highlighted below:

Consistent with Goal 1 of the UH Hilo Strategic Plan, students in Gender and Women's Studies will demonstrate critical thinking skills that are relevant to issues of diversity, advocacy, knowledge creation, and global (especially Pan-Pacific) change. Allied faculty will provide an environment that fosters mentoring. This is particularly important for female and other students from groups experiencing marginality. Students will learn through internships and service learning experiences that connect students to research, policy-making, practice, advocacy, cultural, and justice activities. Block 2 of the Program (Leadership and Social Change) provides an analytical and ethical framework in which to view leadership and social change.

In support of Goal 2 of the Plan, Gender and Women's Studies is well-positioned to become a center of teaching and research excellence on our campus. The Certificate Program already draws upon the contributions of an excellent faculty. Two allied faculty were the 2011 recipients of Excellence in Teaching Awards; the Instructor for the Women's Studies Certificate received the award in 2010.^[1] Allied faculty have a strong record of engaging students in research projects, providing all-important undergraduate research experience. The organization of this Program will support faculty-to-faculty mentoring, with a strong interdisciplinary approach to fostering professional excellence. Interdisciplinary programs today promote cutting-edge teaching and knowledge creation; this new Program, including the minor, will bring a strong interdisciplinary focus to UH Hilo, in keeping with emergent trends in higher education (Klein 1999).

The principles of Gender and Women's Studies are inextricably linked to issues of diversity (in support of Goal 4), reflecting the multicultural heritage of Hawai'i, the Pan-Pacific, and acknowledging the diversity of human sexual identities. The electives of the Program/s minor underscore the importance of diversity to our students. An understanding of the intersections of gender and indigenous identity represents a vibrant direction for our campus to highlight in teaching, research, and advocacy. Further, through an understanding of the ways in which social processes and institutions are themselves gendered, we provide a valuable perspective on social and cultural change in the State of Hawai'i.

In support of Goal 5, the Gender and Women's Studies Program, including the minor, builds the capacity of the community's workforce and leadership needs by promoting an understanding of gender as a fundamental aspect of organizations and institutions. The Program learning outcomes promote the skills sets like critical thinking, collaboration, leadership, and communication that are necessary in contemporary workplaces. Graduates will be ready to take on leadership roles, particularly as part of organizations that deal with critical social issues affecting Hawai'i's families and institutions. Internships in the Program will connect students with the workplace, especially in agencies of government and the non-profit sector.

Gender and Women's Studies affirms and supports the University of Hawai'i System Strategic Outcomes and Performance Measures (2008-2015) and their underlying values of "academic rigor and excellence, integrity and service, aloha and respect." The degree, including the minor, will contribute to the expansion of Hawai'i's educational capital by serving diverse groups of students including non-traditional age women and men, many of whom are low-income and Native Hawaiian students from underserved regions (especially of Hawai'i Island) who are looking for a relevant course of study. Our excellent faculty will offer mentoring and extra-curricular research opportunities that will attract, retain, and graduate students who are first-generation college and low-income students, thus increasing the educational capital of the State.^[2] This degree will also prepare students for effective engagement and leadership in a global environment by providing a curriculum that promotes respect for diversity, gender equity, and multiculturalism particularly in the trans-Pacific context. Students will be well-prepared to compete in the global context, particularly in view of the interdisciplinary and global nature of the curriculum in Business, Humanities, and the Social Sciences.

A degree program, including the minor, in Gender and Women's Studies at UH Hilo will serve important "external" needs in Hawai'i County. The insights that gender brings are fundamental to addressing many of the complex social problems that impact this community. Whether it concerns the diminishing number of young Hawai'i Island men in higher education or investigating patterns of family violence, we need to build the capacity of local institutions to understand gendered dynamics. Hawai'i Island leaders applaud the anticipated program as a means of building capacity in the workforce to address these issues (see letters attached). Hawai'i County Prosecuting Attorney Charlene Iboshi writes in support of this new program: "... it is clear that there are gender differences that have been demonstrated in the criminal justice response to criminal offenders. Our desire is to enhance our community's understanding and capacity to respond to the unique dynamics of gender in education, the workforce and the institutional programs involving the courts, especially in the psycho-social dynamics that lead to victimization and criminal behaviors." Ms. Iboshi adds: "The proposed Program can help build the workforce and human capital in this community to develop the appropriate responses to gender specific dynamics in the interdisciplinary fields of social sciences, humanities, administration of justice and law, political science, psychology, and business."

Another partner in the community, Heidi Koop, Director of Hawai'i Island Programs for Child and Family Services (one of the largest human services providers in the State and a significant employer), writes: "As our mission is "Strengthening Families and Fostering the Healthy Development of Children," we are aware of the importance of understanding the gendered power relations in families and the effects on children. In our Domestic Abuse, Sexual Abuse and Crisis Response programs, we very deeply understand that staff must be very well trained in Gender and Women's Studies. In addition, this is an excellent opportunity to provide a career path to talented and goal-oriented students who can continue with graduate programs such as MSW and Psychology."

We conclude, therefore, that this is a minor (and major) that will be greeted with enthusiasm by both faculty and students, as well as making an important contributions to the workforce, community leadership, and the capacity of that leadership to address a range of complex questions and challenges.

Our program will be an interdisciplinary forum that exposes students to multifaceted, diverse perspectives on gender-related issues. These issues include an in-depth understanding of the social construction and cultural significance of masculinity and femininity; ethnicity, race and social class; the biological and cultural aspects of sex and reproduction; sexual orientation; gender roles; gender as an organizing factor in social, economic, and political institutions; childhood socialization; the representation of sex and gender in media and the arts; as well as historical and current perspectives across cultures. Gender and Women's Studies also offers a strong theoretical background in a variety of critical perspectives, which examine how institutional policies, hegemonic cultural practices, and patriarchal traditions intersect with our lived experience.

The University of Hawai'i at Hilo offers high quality undergraduate liberal arts and professional programs. Gender and Women's Studies supports the University's goal to prepare students to meet the demands of both profession and citizenship. Lower-division courses provide study in disciplinary subjects, basic theory and methodology, and the development and application of skills. Upper-division courses pursue advanced theory, applied methods, independent research, and internships. Students will be encouraged to develop projects relevant to their personal and professional goals. The UH Hilo Gender and Women's Studies degree program will offer flexibility and support for students to develop the skills necessary for post-graduate work and/or career opportunities. Through Gender and Women's Studies, a critical part of the liberal arts and professional education offered at UH Hilo is that students come to understand the social structures of gender that influence the professional workplace as well as other aspects of human experience. Gender and Women's Studies offers students a strong emphasis in advocacy, leadership skills, critical thinking, effective writing and research in the social, scientific and cultural context of the Asian-Pacific basin. Its content will move us toward understanding issues of gender equity and globalization, particularly in the Pan-Pacific context.

[1] Sarah Marusek, Political Science, received the Francis Davis Award and Lauri Sagle, English, received the Chancellor's Award for Excellence in Teaching in 2011. Amy Gregg, Women's Studies Instructor, won the Chancellor's Award for Excellence in Teaching in 2010. Faith Mishina was a recipient of the Chancellor's Award for Excellence in Teaching in 1997.

[2] Professors Susan Brown, Lynn Morrison, and Marilyn Brown, to identify a few, have involved students like these in faculty-research projects.

4. Describe any additional library resources, facilities, equipment or other resources required for the new or modified program and provide an estimate of such costs.

Type in "None" if appropriate.

The minor in Gender and Women's Studies doesn't require any new library or other resources. Because it is based on courses already being taught in the curriculum (as with the current Certificate), required resources are already in use at UH Hilo.

5. Describe any additional faculty required for the new or modified program and provide an estimate of such costs.

The proposed major and minor build on the current Certificate Program in Women's Studies. Except for two core courses (and some electives) taught by the current WS Instructor, the entire Certificate Program is delivered by existing faculty across eleven departments (across two Colleges) who teach these cross-listed courses as part of their units' regular offerings. The degree program will be delivered in the same way, leveraging these interdisciplinary courses in a cost-effective manner. The designation of WS (and, later, GWS) is of reciprocal benefit to participating Departments in that this content is a catalyst to increasing both faculty and student interest.

Therefore, no new faculty are required in order to go forward with this Program. The Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences has given the Director of Women's Studies one course release per academic year for serving in this capacity. Typically, this leadership comes from the affiliate faculty and will continue to do so for the new Program.

6. If this is a new program or a new certificate or a minor or a new track within an existing program, copy and paste from a Word document into the window below a catalog-ready list of the graduation (or minor or certificate) requirements, including required courses and acceptable electives.

If this is a program modification, copy and paste the current requirements into the window below; strike out portions to be deleted, and underline any new or additional portions.

Reminder: This proposal is for one type of program. Include requirements for only one type of program: the BA, or the minor, or the certificate, as indicated by the type of program you selected when you created this proposal.
