SUBJECT: Participation of Information and Computer Sciences Graduate
Program with the EECB Graduate Specialization

The Ecology, Evolution and Conservation Biology (EECB) Graduate Specialization was established to facilitate communication and collegiality among the various graduate programs at the University of Hawaii at Manoa with research interests in the three topic areas ecology, evolution, and/or conservation biology. The EECB graduate faculty includes faculty from the following academic departments and research units:

- * Anthropology (0 at present)
- * Biology (Zoology program) (8)
- * Botany (12)
- * Cell and Molecular Biology (1)
- * Geography (2)
- * Geology and Geophysics (1)
- * HIMB (2)
- * Marine Biology
- * Microbiology (0 at present)
- * NREM (2)
- * Oceanography (2)
- * PBRC (5)
- * PEPS (Entomology program) (1)
- * TPSS (0 at present)

* Departments Hosting Presently Participating Programs

Cooperating and Affiliate Faculty have been from the University of Hawaii at Hilo, Hawaii Cooperative Fishery Research Unit, Bishop Museum, US Fish and Wildlife Service, US Department of Agriculture, and US Geological Survey.

One faculty member of the Information and Computer Sciences Graduate Program (ICS), Dr. Lee Altenberg, has been recently accepted to the faculty of the EECB Graduate Specialization. It is also anticipated that in the coming years there will be other ICS faculty that may have interests in the EECB disciplines due to the rise of computational biology and data-intensive computation applications in ecology, evolution, and conservation biology. As such, there is a strong likelihood that future ICS graduate students may similarly have interests in participating in the benefits of the EECB Graduate Specialization.

There are several benefits to the students. First and most importantly, it allows the students academic communication with a diverse array of professionals within the EECB community. This has been of tremendous value as they endeavor to establish their thesis/dissertation committees, seek advice on research issues or professional development, analysis of data, etc. Many of these contacts would not be established if the students were not aware of the faculty resources, something done through EECB activity.

Secondly, the EECB program has obtained funding through grants and donations to support graduate student research. There are presently three fellowships that students apply to each Spring term with funds available ranging up to $5000 per fellowship. The fellowships include (details at <http://www.hawaii.edu/eecb/current.html>):

- Maybelle Roth Fellowships (an ARCS award)
- Hampton and Meredith Carson Fellowships
- Watson T. Yoshimoto Fellowships

Thirdly, the weekly Evoluncheon seminar provides students with a wide variety of research talks to broaden their scope of knowledge and get better insights into research methods they might apply. Most importantly, it is an opportunity for the students to present their research in a seminar format to a friendly audience that can give them positive feedback on their work, input for possible future studies or additional analyses, and do so either in a short (meeting-style) or long (seminar) format. The current semester's seminar series is posted at <http://www.hawaii.edu/eecb/index.html> with five students have or will be presenting this semester.

Admission requirements to the EECB Specialization, in addition to OGE and department requirements (online at <http://www.hawaii.edu/eecb/admissions.html>), include the following:

- Acceptance into a graduate program in an academic department
- Enrollment at the University of Hawaii at Manoa

AN EQUAL OPPORTUNITY / AFFIRMATIVE ACTION INSTITUTION

- EECB faculty sponsorship (generally, but not required, being the student's major advisor)
- Research interests (via written statement) in one (or more) of the three disciplines of EECB

There are no costs associated with participation in the EECB Specialization. Faculty time is given freely by those involved and there is no financial support to the program by any of the academic departments or colleges. Faculty have worked with students to develop fundraiser activities (T-shirt sales, food sales, donations, etc) for student events.

We appreciate your attention to this request.
