2.2a) If Other, please describe

2.3) Proposal Summary

The certificate program in Hawaiian-Pacific Studies offers education opportunities for UHWO students majoring in fields other than Hawaiian-Pacific Studies. This would provide these students with basic, introductory information on Native Hawaiian and/or Pacific Islander cultures that could enhance their careers in Hawai'i and the wider Pacific. Students would learn specific aspects of Native Hawaiian and/or Pacific Island peoples (such as history, geography, politics, arts, music, literature, contemporary issues and cultural practices to deepen cultural understanding, enrich and enhance educational experiences. Moreover, students would learn of indigenous approaches and world views that enhance student cultural competencies and abilities to add alternative view to problem solving in their chosen fields. The Certificate will be relevant in the hospitality, business, law, health administration, creative media, applied sciences, and education disciplines, and for Immersion teachers in the DOE. For example, for a student majoring in business or hospitality and who plans to work in Hawai'i or the wider Pacific, taking this certificate would provide them with Native Hawaiian and Pacific cultural understandings and perspectives that would enhance their career.

2.4) Justification or Rationale for Program Action

The Certificate in Hawaiian-Pacific Studies provides a pathway where students in disciplines other than Hawaiian-Pacific Studies can take the Certificate to obtain some basic competency in Native Hawaiian and/or Pacific Islander knowledge and language. The Certificate is linked with high priority initiatives of our campus and aligns with Humanities Division goals. It supports the UH system and UHWO Strategic Action Plan 2018-2028 by providing a Certificate that focuses on Native Hawaiian and indigenous Pacific perspectives that prepare our students to be internationally connected and culturally grounded in people and environmental responsibility that nurtures sustainable growth. Due to the increasingly global environment of academic teaching, business and sustainable business ventures as in agroforestry, ecotourism, social and/or indigenous entrepreneurship; understanding of indigenous Hawaiian and Pacific knowledge are in demand for those who will work in Hawai'i and/or the Pacific. The Certificate will be relevant in the hospitality, business, health administration, creative media, applied sciences, and education disciplines, and for Immersion teachers in the DOE. For example, for a student majoring in Business or Hospitality and who plans to work in Hawai'i or the wider Pacific, taking this certificate would provide them with Native Hawaiian and Pacific cultural understandings and perspectives that would enhance their career. A student majoring in education, who takes this certificate could bring a Native Hawaiian and Pacific perspective to their work, which can enhance student learning in schools in our Hawaiian-Pacific Islander communities and help those students be successful.

3.6) Catalog Description

The certificate program in Hawaiian-Pacific Studies offers education opportunities for UHWO students majoring in fields other than Hawaiian-Pacific Studies. This would provide these students with basic, introductory information on Native Hawaiian and/or Pacific Islander cultures that could enhance their careers in Hawai'i and the wider Pacific. Students would learn specific aspects of Native Hawaiian and/or Pacific Island peoples (such as history, geography, politics, arts, music, literature, contemporary issues and cultural practices to deepen cultural understanding, enrich and enhance educational experiences. The Certificate will be relevant in the hospitality, business, law, health administration, creative media, applied sciences, and education disciplines, and for Immersion teachers in the DOE. For example, for a student majoring in business, hospitality, land management or education and who plans to work in Hawai'i or the wider Pacific, taking this certificate would provide them with Native Hawaiian and Pacific cultural understandings and perspectives that would enhance their career. The attainment and certification of cultural competencies, and indigenous knowledge in addition to academic credentials, would also add value to students degree major, boost career opportunities and career fluidity.

3.7) Course(s) for the Program

Curriculum for the Certificate in Hawaiian-Pacific Studies (15-16 Credits)

Students must take a 300-level overview class of the Pacific (3 credits); one class (3-4 credits) of a Pacific Islands language; and three classes, one each from three of the four clusters in Hawaiian-Pacific Studies (9 credits).

Overview Class of Pacific (linked to Hawaii) – 3 credits (1 class)

Students must take 1 of the following:

HPST 304 Hawaiian-Pacific Traditions (3 cr)* or

HPST 365 Geography of the Pacific (3 cr)*

Pacific Islands Language – 3-4 credits (1 class)

Take 1 class of a Pacific Islands language. [See HPST faculty for placement tests and/or for native speaker exemptions].

UHWO offers the following language classes.

HAW 101 Elementary Hawaiian I (4 cr)*
 HAW 102 Elementary Hawaiian II (4 cr)*
 HAW 201 Intermediate Hawaiian I (4 cr)*
 HAW 202 Intermediate Hawaiian II (4 cr)*
 HAW 301 Third Level Hawaiian I (3 cr)*
 HAW 302 Third Level Hawaiian II (3 cr)*
 HAW 401 Fourth Level Hawaiian I (3 cr)*
 HAW 402 Fourth Level Hawaiian II (3 cr)*
 HAW 321 Kama'ilio Hawaii (3 cr)*
 SAM 101 Elementary Samoan I (4 cr)*
 SAM 102 Elementary Samoan II (4 cr)
 SAM 201 Intermediate Samoan I (4 cr)
 SAM 202 Intermediate Samoan II (4 cr)

Language courses at the 100 and 200 level are 4 credits for each course. If the student is placed into a higher class, the number of credits at the 300 and 400 level are 3 credits for each course. Thus, the total credits for this part of the certificate could be 3 or 4 credits.

Courses can also be taken elsewhere.

Classes in Cluster Areas of Hawaiian-Pacific Studies – 9 additional credits (3 classes)

Hawaiian-Pacific Studies (HPST) has upper division courses in 4 Clusters – Literature Cluster, Arts Cluster, History Cluster, and Contemporary Culture & Issues Cluster.

Students take three (3) classes from three of the four different clusters, selecting from the course offerings listed below.
